Petition Seeking Rehearing of Hall Sales Act Is Filed

MERCHANTS PROTEST

Believe Certain Parts of Law Overlooked by High Court

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—A petition for a rehearing of the Arkansas Supreme Court decision upholding constitutionality of the Hall two per cent sales tax was filed Wednesday. Action is expected on the petition before July 1, when the tax becomes effective if the rehearing is denied.

The petition was filed by attorneys for Joe Isaacs, Blytheville merchant, and William Hundhausen, West Memphis merchant. They stated that they believed certain parts of the record and law relative to the case had been overlooked by the court in its decision, and that the purpose of delaying collection of the sales tax.

HELENA, Ark.—(AP)—Opposition flared into the open here Tuesday against the Arkansas two per cent sales tax which is scheduled to go into effect July 1. If the Supreme Court denies a motion for rehearing its decision upholding constitutionality of the law.

West Helena merchants started circulation of petitions urging Governor Futrell to call a special legislative session to repeal the sales tax law or reduce other state taxes. The petitions appeared shortly after the Helena Retail Merchants Association voted to follow any method adopted by other Arkansas towns in opposing payment of the two per cent levy. The association instructed its secretary to contact retail merchant groups at Blytheville, Little Rock, Fort Smith and Pine Bluff concerning means of fighting the tax. A meeting of the Helena association is planned later.

The West Helena Young Men's Business Club is sponsoring the special session petition against the sales tax with a committee planning to circulate them in all Eastern Arkansas towns.

A warning against drastic steps in the movement against the tax came from A. B. Lewis of the Helena Retail Merchants organization. He said he believed it a useless cause to attempt to refuse payment of the levy.

Presbyterian School Opens at Batesville

BATESVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—Dr. W. S. Lacy, president of the Arkansas College, welcomed students Tuesday night at the opening of the Arkansas Presbyterian Synodical Training School. The school is sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church of America. Mrs. L. B. Montgomery of Pine Bluff is faculty director.

Plans Are Devised to Retain Agents

$1,200 Needed by Saturday to Keep Hempstead Agents

12 Townships of County Assigned Quotas for Drive

TO RAISE $500 HERE Committees Will Canvass Hope and County Thursday and Friday

At a mass meeting held at Hope city hall Tuesday afternoon, representatives of all townships in Hempstead county and Hope business men devised plans to retain county agent Frank Stanley and Miss Helen Griffin, home demonstration agent.

Facing a possibility of having the office closed Saturday unless funds are raised to pay the county's half of their salaries, it was decided to raise a total of $1,200 needed for the remainder of the year by allotting a quota to each of the 12 townships. DeRoan township, in which Hope is located, was assigned the sum of $500. The balance of the required amount was prorated among the other 11 townships.

Drive Starts Thursday Committees will canvass the county Thursday and Friday to secure pledges from business men and farmers of each township. No efforts will be made to remove the office and records before Saturday, pending success of efforts of the committees.

Haley White of Hope, was named secretary and treasurer at the meeting Tuesday afternoon and will accept contributions from anyone who wishes to donate funds for this cause. A committee of a dozen will canvass Hope and DeRoan township.

County Judge H. M. Stephens, presiding over the meeting, told the audience that Hempstead county did not have funds to pay the salaries of the two agents and urged co-operation of all business men and farmers in an effort to raise funds.

Necessity of Agents Told "The county has paid their salaries through May. But now all funds for this purpose have been exhausted, due to decreased revenue of the county."

It would be a calamity to lose our agents. We need $1,200 to carry them the balance of the year, and we must raise this amount before Saturday. It's up to all of us. Our agents are needed now more than any other time. To carry on the federal farm program in Hempstead county without the agents would be a serious problem to all concerned," Judge Stephens declared.

Other speakers told the necessity of the farm agents and home demonstration agent, and pointed out benefits derived from their services to Hempstead county farmers and the public in general.

Committees were assigned to canvass each township, and the drive for funds starts Thursday. Total of $1,200 must be raised by Saturday to pay the county's share of salaries for the two agents, or the office will be moved to an adjoining county.

300 Rioting Convicts Are Subdued at Kansas Prison

21-Hour Mutiny Ends Early Wednesday After Rebellious Prisoners Threaten to Blow Up Coal Mine—Better Food and New Physician Asked

LANSING, Kan.—(AP)—A score of officers and guards, led by Warden Lacey Simpson, subdued 300 rioting convicts early Wednesday in the inky darkness of the Kansas State prison coal mine, thus ending a 21-hour mutiny.

Soon as the first load of mutineers, sheepish, bedraggled, came to the surface and marched past a line of heavily armed prison, county and state highway officers to the prison cell block.

Within an hour evacuation of the coal mine was complete.

Blast Is Threatened LANSING, Kan.—(AP)—Defying tear gas and bullets, 347 rioting convicts in the smoke-filled Kansas penitentiary coal mine threatened Tuesday night to "tear up the damn mine" unless demands for better food and new prison physician were granted specifically.

Communicating by telephone with Warden Lacey Simpson, seated in the mine tipples, the mutineers rejected an invitation to come out with their 11 hostages and name a committee to present their demands before the State Board of Administration.

"We can't do anything with you down here," Simpson said. "Come on up and we'll treat you square."

"Nothing doing," the convict spokesman retorted. "And we'll tear up the damn mine if you don't do something right away."

The warden departed for another conference with members of the board, who came here from Topeka late Tuesday.

Convicts Start Fire Smoke continued to roll up the air shaft from a fire in the mine's mule barns at the 730-foot level. The convicts set fire to hay stored there to halt an advance upon them led by Deputy Warden A. J. Graham. The fire subsided late Tuesday night.

Graham and six armed guards were forced to retreat. They fired a dozen shots as they did so. Graham said he did not believe any of the convicts were wounded.

They saw no trace of the 10 guards and Mine Superintendent Robert Murphy—presumably in the hands of the convicts.

It was not believed that either the striking convicts or their hostages had eaten since they descended between 6 and 7 a. m.

There was drinking water in the mine, but little if any food.

Efforts Are Being Made to Retain White Camp This County

Governor Futrell Seeks the Aid of Senators Robinson and Caraway

WHITE CAMP SOUGHT Misunderstanding Occurs When Negro Project Accepted

Negotiations were underway here Wednesday to retain the CCC camp, six miles south of Hope, after cancellation because of objections to location of a negro camp.

Telegrams received in Hope Wednesday from Governor Futrell said that he had wired Senators Robinson and Caraway protesting against cancellation of the soil erosion project.

The governor's telegram said that "a white camp had been promised this county and construction work had half-way been completed."

Hope citizens Tuesday wired the governor that a negro camp had been assigned to Hempstead through a misunderstanding.

Governor Futrell's telegram to the Arkansas senators said that he believed the camp should not be taken away from Hempstead in view of the misunderstanding and the earlier belief that white CCC workers would be assigned to that camp.

The mixup here resulted when Hope citizens consented to accept a negro camp under the impression that both a white and negro camp was to be located.

Decision Up to Governor WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Emergency Conservation Director Robert Fechner advised protesting citizens of Hope, Ark., that the question of locating a negro civilian conservation corps camp was within the jurisdiction of Governor Futrell of Arkansas.

Mayor Albert Graves of Hope and others protested in telegrams to Senator Hattie W. Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas, that a negro camp had been designated at Alton, Ark., a few miles south of Hope. Graves said a CCC camp composed of white youths had been promised and he requested help in preventing the loss of the white camp.

President Roosevelt conferred for an hour with Treasury and Internal Revenue officials, including Secretary Morgenthau.

Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, said he would confer with President Roosevelt soon to ascertain the administration's views on tax legislation. Harrison is chairman of the Finance Committee, which will consider in executive session Wednesday the resolution to continue two years the $502,000,000 in nuisance levies. The resolution was adopted by the House Monday.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A senate-vote on the administration's social security bill was blocked late Tuesday by a debate over an amendment to exempt private pension plans and reported Democratic attacks on the constitutionality of the measure.

Senate leaders had hoped to dispose of the bill Tuesday, but when debate on the Clark amendment dragged on they compromised with an agreement to vote on Wednesday and limit debate so that the entire bill would be disposed of by nightfall.

The amendment was offered by Senator Clark, Democrat, Missouri, who contends many private systems were more liberal than the plan proposed by the government. He sought to exempt from the contemplated six per cent tax against employers and employees all companies which had plans as good or better than the public plan.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The House Banking and Currency Committee was told Tuesday by Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, that President Roosevelt had approved in principle a bill by Representative Terry, Democrat, Arkansas, to make loans available through the Reconstruction Corporation to debt-distressed school districts in 23 states.

Acting Chairman Goldborough, Democrat, Maryland, promised to conclude the hearing on the Terry bill Wednesday.

Terry, Robinson and Dr. Howard A. Dawson, consultant of the U. S. Office of Education, were heard in support of the measure to authorize the RFC to lend up to $10,000,000 to school districts, so that they may refinance their bonded and current obligations.

Robinson indicated he would introduce the same measure in the senate.

CORNING, Ark.—(AP)—Howard Hagan and Peter Raster, both about 27, were convicted and sentenced to 15 years each in prison late Tuesday for the $3,560 robbery of the Corning Bank and Trust Company October 6.

The jury reached its verdict after deliberating an hour and a half. Neither Hagan nor Raster testified in support of alibis designed to show they were not in Corning the day the bank was raided by three men.

Ordering full speed ahead in the federal work-relief drive, in which $4,000,000 will be spent in a year in an effort to give jobs to 3,500,000, Harry Hopkins instructed his aides to end the delay, keep projects free from politics, and see that the government gets full value for every dollar expended.

Washington Man Succumbs Tuesday

Erby F. Turner, 58, Had Been Ill for Many Months

Erby F. Turner, 58, well known Hempstead county man, died at his home in Washington Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Turner had been ill for several months. Death was attributed to a heart ailment.

He was born and raised at Spring Hill, moving from there to Washington.

Surviving are his widow, two sons, Webster Turner of Chicago, and Harvey Lee Turner of Washington, two daughters, Mrs. Horace A. Young, Chicago, and Mrs. Harold J. Dowling of Onida, N. Y., also one brother, J. W. Turner of Spring Hill.

Funeral services were held from First Methodist church in Washington at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, conducted by the Rev. H. H. Harrell. Burial was in Washington cemetery.

Active pallbearers were: Ev. Timberlake, Lanny Beck, Lat Moses, Mack Parsons, Paul Rowe, and Bob Lewis. Honorary pallbearers were: W. V. Frazier, Jim Dugger, T. N. Catts, W. E. Elmore, W. B. Nelson, and W. H. Weir.

Luke Lea Seeks to Escape Second Charge

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.—(AP)—Luke Lea, already seeking a pardon from the banking law violation conviction that put him in North Carolina prison, was revealed Tuesday as trying to be freed from other charges brought against him in connection with his once widespread financial activities.

Lea's lawyer has filed in district federal court here a motion for acquittal for Lea of charges of aiding and abetting J. Basil Ramsey, president of the defunct Holston Union National bank at Knoxville, in national banking law violations.

Ramsey was acquitted at Knoxville, in the same federal court district, several weeks ago. The motion contended that since Ramsey, indicted as principal of the case, had been cleared, the charges against Lea should be dropped.

District Attorney James B. Frazier, Jr., said that Lea's move was "premature" and argued that he could be tried even though Ramsey had been cleared.

Lea and others were indicted at Nashville in 1931 on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the closed Liberty Bank and Trust Company of $150,000. The charges were nolle prossed shortly after Lea was taken to prison.

If a pardon is granted, federal authorities have served a detainer on North Carolina prison officials directing them to release Lea only to a government officer.

Hiler Visits Washington

J. L. Hiler, county agent for Nevada county, left Saturday, June 15, for Washington, D. C. to confer with officials on the Cotton Reduction Program and to clear up all unpaid 1934 cotton contracts.

The first dwelling house in Birmingham, Ala., was built in 1835 and is still standing.

Property Damage Runs Into Millions in Several States

300 Relief Workers to Strengthen Red River Levees

34 FEET IS PREDICTED Arkansas River Cracks in Two More Places Wednesday

By the Associated Press
Disastrous spring floods, fed by rainfall considerably higher than average in most parts of the nation, Wednesday had claimed an unofficial total of 175 lives.

Millions of dollars of property damage and undetermined losses to farmers in 11 mid-Western states has resulted from flood waters.

The greatest loss was in Nebraska where floods took 106 lives within the past week.

Repair Red River Dykes The Hope office of the FERA prepared Wednesday to dispatch 200 or 300 relief workers to the Red river flood area near Fulton Thursday in anticipation of a further rise of the stream.

Strengthening the levees south of Fulton was already in progress Wednesday, labor being furnished by private landowners. Low places from the flood gate to Red Lake were being filled in for a strip a mile in length.

The county is furnishing a large tractor and grading machine.

The river reading at the toll bridge early Wednesday was 27.4 feet, a rise of about two feet over Tuesday morning.

A stage of 32 to 34 feet is predicted by Friday, J. W. Cronk of the Shreveport weather bureau, warned.

Two More Breaks LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Bankfull and still rising angry Arkansas river cracked into two more retaining levees Wednesday as it boiled across the state to dump its muddy flood into the Mississippi river south of Memphis.

Lea's Lake levee near Van Buren in the far west part of Arkansas went out under combined pressure of the river and swollen lake, sending fresh flood waters toward 1,500 acres of rich bottom land.

A few miles southeast a protecting dike in front of Cadron bottoms near Morrilton gave way, resulting in inundation of some 30,000 acres of farm land in Pope and Conway counties.

Sandbags were being thrown up to protect North Little Rock Wednesday.

Governor Futrell called out the National Guard to aid 400 men working to strengthen levees at Pine Bluff.

State Emergency Relief headquarters at Little Rock reported over three thousand families had been menaced or driven from their homes by floods. Orders were sent out to all county supervisors to be ready "for any emergency."

Flying Brothers Are On Way to New Record

MERIDIAN, Miss.—(AP)—Despite unfavorable weather the Key brothers Fred and Al, kept their plane functioning under difficulty Tuesday in their third effort to break the world endurance flight record. At 4:32 p. m. they passed their 34th hour in the air. The record is 533 hours, 41 minutes and 30 seconds.

Word Returned Home Frank Ward returned Wednesday from Little Rock, where he attended a meeting of the examining board of the Arkansas State Board of Pharmacy Monday and Tuesday.

Many Ailments Spring From the Mind

We human beings are peculiar in that we can actually delude ourselves into the belief that we are sick.

In other words, our minds play so significant a part in our activities that, by wrong use of our imaginations, we can actually do ourselves immense harm.

More than 50 years ago, a leading British physician said there was not a single actual disease of the body with symptoms which could not be reproduced by the mind. Medical records lend force to his contention.

These disturbances sometimes result from emotional reactions. Or they may be a "hangover" from a previous disease. Sometimes they are caused by worry and anxiety. And, in still other cases, they may result from a combination of all these factors.

When the symptoms appear, they attract so much attention that they continue to exist merely because the "patient" likes the attention.

There are some very interesting examples. A 45-year-old woman had been troubled with the feeling that there was a lump in her throat. Investigation revealed this impression had developed at a time when there was some doubt whether she had a tumor of the breast.

When she was convinced that no actual change in the throat had occurred, the woman's mental symptoms disappeared.

An unusual number of these "mental illnesses" have to do with the stomach and the gastro-intestinal tract, perhaps because eating occupies such an important part in all our lives.

Many are the cases for instance, in which these self-deluded people find it impossible to keep food in the stomach. Vomiting follows promptly after every meal, sometimes reducing people to such a low state of nutrition that they fall a ready prey to any passing infectious disease, even though the cause of the vomiting is wholly mental.

In fact, many of these "sufferers" develop physical conditions which may be overlooked for a long period of time simply because of the emphasis placed on a disturbance wholly in the mind.

Most interesting of late are the so-called neuroses of the heart. In times of depression and financial strain, people suffer greatly from worry and anxiety, and are inclined to have palpitations of the heart. Many even develop a rapid heartbeat.

When the financial worries and strain disappear, however, they usually take with them these physical symptoms.

Finds Fun in Orient, Despite Breakdowns—Book Is Cheerful Description of Unusual Motor Trip

A young man saw a sandwich man in London advertising a trip to India for 34 pounds, and that's how an adventuresome journey to India and the Orient was made, and how a delightful book of travel was written.

The young man is Patrick Balfour, descendant of nobility, but adventurer with a humor that is bright and cheerful. The book is his "Grand Tour."

Young Balfour found himself accompanying a British diplomat return in glo his post in India, before he could determine how wise or foolish his act would be. One of their two cars ran into a French motor truck almost at the beginning of the long trip, both sometimes got stuck on the uncertain roads of Arabia and Afghanistan, and other difficulties arose all the way across the Near East to India.

But these adventures are only secondary to a breezy description of the journey, and a pleasant introduction to the kind of people the ordinary traveler wants to meet in a strange country.

The author left his host and other companions in India, and went on, with his close friend, across Nepal, down to the Andaman Islands and over to Siam, before they turned back home.

His "diary," as he calls it, is a col-

Summer Sweethearts

By Mabel McElliot © 1935, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

KATHARINE STRYKER, 20 and beautiful, allows her emotions to rule when she marries MICHAEL HEATHCOTE, young riding instructor who comes into a title and fortune. Katharine's father is rich and her stepmother is snobbish.

The night following his marriage Michael is injured in a traffic accident and when he regains consciousness his memory is impaired. He forgets the marriage. Katharine, unaware of this, believes he has deserted her. She plans to leave for New Mexico and her friend, VIOLET MERSEY, agrees to engage a lawyer in her absence to arrange an annulment of the marriage.

DR. JOHN KAYE, an old friend, sees Katharine off on her trip. He tells her he has always loved her.

SALLY MOON, who has married Michael into a sort of engagement, plans for their wedding, unaware of Michael's marriage to Katharine.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXVI

DARK polished floors, Indian jars in unexpected niches. Rugs, brightly colored and geometrically gay. Thick pottery cups and a plaid cloth on a sturdy oaken table in the patio. This, for the moment, was Katharine's domain.

"Silencia" was the fanciful name Evelyn Herbert's friend, Mrs. Houghton, had given to her desert inn. It was informal and charming. There was always enough hot water for baths in the deep coral tub which had been brought from San Francisco five years before; there was delicious food—hot, spicy meats and crisp green salads; there were gorgeous, blazing sunsets and blistering noontides and purple nights, spangled with stars. At present Mrs. Houghton had only a few guests.

Besides Katharine there was a tall Englishman who vaguely "wrote." No one quite knew what. And there were two maiden ladies from Boston who looked about the climate and kept delicate lace shawls wrapped around their shoulders against the night air, and who read "deep" books and discussed them in cultivated accents over the luncheon table.

Katharine felt as one feels whose soul has been torn and who feels the stitches healing a little. The first day after her arrival she had been actually, physically ill. Evelyn Herbert had been frankly alarmed, and had spoken of sending for the girl's parents. But the quiet, the blessed peace of the place, had taken some hold on Katharine; her naturally splendid physique had asserted itself.

The little Mexican maid, Margarita, came out and began to leisurely fashion to set the table. "Only three for lunch today," she said companionably, with a flash of white teeth in a dark face, to Katharine who was sketching the angle of the creamy adobe wall with a splash of tree-shadow sharply etched against it.

"Only three?" Katharine looked up with an answering smile. "Then Mr. Delafield has gone into Santa Fe as he planned?"

MARGARITA nodded, slapping down the thin silver knives and forks and moving the empty tumblers into place. The little fountain splashed merrily in the silence and overhead a great bird wheeled and curved in the blue arc of the sky. Katharine put down her pencil and rawned deeply. This was living—really living. Work that you liked and good food and sleep when your body ached with weariness.

Margarita clattered over the flags of the courtyard on her cheap noisy heels, and the girl was left alone again. Presently Miss Daisy Ingram, the youngest of the Boston sisters, would come out with her book and her long nettie. Evelyn Vincent who had been playing the old-fashioned grand piano would wander out. Katharine would take a tray up to Miss Roxana Ingram who had a headache. Over all would be silence and ineffable peace.

Katharine's sketch was coming out right. Her work was really improving. One of these days she would have a letter from Violet, saying the tangle at home was straightened out . . . but she mustn't think of that now.

"How about going over to the Millards for tea today?" Miss Vincent wanted to know, strolling out into the patio.

"I don't know," Katharine yawned. "I had a book to read and I thought I'd nap. And then I ought to write a note to my father."

Evelyn Vincent smiled. "This place is getting you. You won't want to stir away from it," she prophesied. "After I get back to New York I always have the deuce of a time getting into harness again."

Katharine thought, "but I'm not going back. . . ."

"This is Friday," Miss Vincent mused. "Funny—you even lose track of the days here. Well, why don't you come along? Dirk Millard is one of the finest mural painters I know. You ought to know him. He says there's a class you should join."

THEY sat down, still talking in dilatory fashion, and Miss Daisy appeared, fluttering and refined as ever, with her bright, intelligent blue eyes sparkling under a fan of stiff white hair and her dotted Swiss crisp and unfashionable. The talk went on over an omelet and salad, over blooming purple figs in a bowl lined with that heavenly shade of turquoise glaze. Katharine joined in the conversation dreamily. Very well then, she would go to the Millards for tea.

Later Katharine had just a glance at the book, but it seemed stale and dull to her. The people were all busy saying clever things. There was a fox-hunting country background, and she tired of it quickly. Nobody, she thought rebelliously as she shut the covers, wrote of any real things now-a-days. They were all busy making epigrams or shocking you or something. . . .

She resolutely turned down the blue cover on her narrow, dark oak bed in the cool, cell-like room, and lay down to nap. She would shut out all unpleasant thoughts. She simply would not let them fly about, like midges, to torment her. She lay there, still in her rumpled thin frock, her arms locked behind her head. Where was Michael Heathcote now? On the high seas, probably, bound toward the British Isles and his fabulous inheritance. Well, that part of her life was over and done with. It had been a mad interlude. It didn't, as John was fond of saying, "add up." It didn't make sense. The sooner she forgot about it, the better for her.

She had not expected to fall asleep, but she did. Perhaps it was because she had slept rather badly the night before.

WHEN she awoke Miss Vincent was tapping at her door. "Aren't you coming, my dear? The Millards will be disappointed."

Well, she might as well go. It would be something to do.

What were the lines of that poem of Margaret Widdemer's she had read once ago, not realizing the truth of it?

"They're flowers and cakes and candlelight,
And chair by crowded chair,
And I am very sweet and kind
Because I do not care . . .
I think that I am hoping still,
If I am very good,
And talk to these around me
As a courteous lady should,
The room will softly split across
And roll to left and right
With all its smiling pasteboard folks
And colored things and light
And let me run into the grass
And climb a sunset hill,
And find three hours one year ago,
When I was living still."

Well, that was the way you felt. You talked and smiled and went through the motions, but it didn't really mean anything. That poem told it all.

Presently she put on a sleeveless green frock and a little belted silk jacket that matched it, and she roused her lips carefully because she was so pale, and she ran down into the patio where Evelyn Vincent was waiting.

"Dear me, aren't you splendid?"

Miss Roxana, recovered from her headache, was stretched out in a deck chair in the shade, knitting. She looked up admiringly. "All the young men will be flocking to Silencia when they know Miss Stryker is about, won't they, Daisy?"

Miss Daisy nodded, and Katharine smiled dutifully and thanked them both for their compliments. She went down the flagged walk to the car with a dull pain at her heart. She would rather, she told herself passionately, be like Miss Roxana, faded and elderly, interested in needlepoint and polite essays, than be herself.

People envied the young—older people did. They talked as if being young was fun in itself. But it wasn't. Not when you'd had a knife turned in your heart. Not if you met each dawn with the sick prayer that you might somehow get through the day.

Misery, a black flood of despair, bowed over her spirit. She gripped the wheel, thankful for the mechanical business of steering the little car over the vile roads. Her companion settled back to enjoy the scenery.

"You don't mind coming, Katharine? I really think you'll enjoy it."

She made some suitable reply. But in her inmost heart she was convinced of one thing. There would never be any real enjoyment for her in this world again. Not while Michael existed, at any rate.

Sterilization Act of Alabama Void

Does Not Provide for Right of Appeal, Says Supreme Court

MONTGOMRY, Ala.—(AP)—The Alabama Supreme Court in an advisory opinion ruled Tuesday that the Dominick sterilization bill passed by the legislature violated both federal and state constitution regarding the right of appeal.

The advisory opinion was asked by Gov. Bibb Graves. It provided for the sterilization of insane, degenerates and habitual criminals under state supervision.

The Supreme Court's unanimous opinion, however, held that the state had the right to provide for sterilization when the proper method was prescribed.

Whether Governor Graves would offer an executive amendment to cure the defects or veto the measure could not be immediately learned.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Summer Diet Is Hazard to Beauty

These hot days, when it's a temptation to eat haphazardly, diets should be carefully balanced to prevent beauty destroying disorders of the system. Light, crisp food, intelligently interspersed with enough hot dishes to make you stay interested in your daily meals, is what everyone, particularly the beauty-minded woman, needs in the summertime.

If you eat the hearty food that tasted so good last winter, you may lack vivacity, and your enthusiasm at midnite disappears rapidly. If on the other hand, you consume nothing but salads, raw vegetables and iced drinks, the chances are that you'll be sluggish and that your digestion will not function efficiently, thereby ruining your complexion.

For breakfast, in addition to fresh fruit, cool tomato juice or some other cold, health beverage, you ought to have something hot and one food that actually will stay with you and keep you from getting irritable and head-a-chie before lunch time. A cold cereal isn't particularly heavy, but it does prevent an empty feeling in the stomach along about 11 o'clock.

Luncheon is the time to go in for the cold foods that taste so good on a hot day. Green salads, cold cuts, light sandwiches and the like are ideal. However, don't order sandwiches day after day at noontime. They aren't particularly easy to digest. Besides, they're fattening.

Your evening meal ought to include at least one substantial hot course. Let this be a well-cooked portion of meat or fish with a hot vegetable or a casserole recipe that strikes your fancy. Of course, if your main meal comes in the middle of the day, cut your food then and let the supper consist of light, green dishes that are refreshing and easily digested.

Isn't It Fine Today!

Sure, this world is full of trouble—I haven't said it isn't. Lord! We've had enough, an' double, Reason for complaint. Rain and storm have come to fret me. Skies were often gray; Thorns and brambles have beset me On the road, but say, Isn't it fine today!

It's today that I am livin', Not a month ago, Havin', losin', takin', givin' As time wills it so. Yesterday a cloud of sorrow Fell across the way; It may rain again tomorrow, It may rain—but, say, Isn't it fine today!—Selected.

"The Glass Key" Is Exciting Drama of Political Battle

The drama of a political battle, the excitement of a murder mystery and the tenderness of romance are the elements from which are woven the engrossing story of Deshaill Hammett's "The Glass Key," showing Thursday and Friday at the cool Saenger.

George Raft returns to the type of characterization which won him fame at the outset of his career in this picture.

Teamed with Edward Arnold, he is the hard-fisted, tight-mouthed and loyal companion of the older man.

Raft risks his life and reputation to uncover the actual murderer and to save his friend, Arnold's pretty daughter, acted by Rosalind Keith, acts as an additional incentive, and after a series of half-brother escapes and adventures, Raft gets his man.

Celebration Held By Lion Oil Co.

S. L. Murphy, Local Agent, Returns From El Dorado Meet

S. L. Murphy, local agent for Lion Oil sales company has just returned to Hope from El Dorado, where he was present at Lion's annual picnic. More than 2500 Lion employees and their families attended this celebration at which Colonel T. H. Barton, president of the Lion companies, presented service chevrons to employees who have been in the employ of Lion Oil five years or longer.

More than 1100 employees of the Lion Oil companies in four states and their families totaling more than 2500 persons, were in El Dorado last week for the celebration of "Lion Oil Day," which was proclaimed by Mayor George R. Crosby in honor of one of the south's largest industries.

The purpose of Lion Oil Day according to Jeff Davis, general attorney for the company and master of ceremonies, in his welcoming address, was for employees and officials of the company to become better acquainted with the company, its officials and each other, and to present service awards to 222 employees who have completed five and ten years' service with the company.

In attendance at the observance were employees, agents, commission men, salesmen and other employees and officials of the Lion Oil Refining company and the Lion Oil Sales company from various sections of Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee and Alabama.

In England, only about 14 per cent of homes are wired for electricity, a total of 1,400,000. There are, however, more than 4,000,000 consumers, including commercial users, and 500 generating plants in the country. These produce 9,000,000,000 kilowatts of power annually.

More common colds are contracted during October than in any other month, according to records of the Public Health Service.

TINY TENNIS

Paddle tennis, a miniature form of the regulation game, is scheduled to sweep the country like miniature golf did a couple of years back. Such is the prediction of Archie Talbot, La Jolla, Calif., playground director, who has introduced the game in the west. The playing area is about a third the size of a tennis court, and the net is only knee-high. Old tennis balls and wooden paddles are used. Here is Talbot explaining the game to a youthful player.

Packed like silks..it takes patience and care to prepare Turkish tobacco for Chesterfield Cigarettes

Size, color, texture, condition . . . all these have something to do with aroma and flavor

Leaf by leaf, the sun-ripened Turkish tobacco is selected or rejected to get just the right kind for Chesterfield's milder, better taste.

And just as much care is taken to pack the tobacco to preserve the delicate aroma during its 4000 mile journey to this country.

So important is the preparation of Turkish tobacco in making Chesterfields, that Liggett & Myers have their own modern leaf handling plants in seven important tobacco centers of Turkey and Greece.

servient to Burlew and his wishes to do their jobs successfully.

Ickes May Yield

One official who recently collided with Burlew over an important appointment in his section is Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker, who had to threaten to quit before he could block a Burlew candidate whose appointment he felt would be a surrender to political influences.

Ickes may yet decide to curb Burlew's power, in an attempt to put his house in order. Turnout in his own backyard during his many fights with Harry Hopkins, Henry Wallace, Jim Farley, and others tends to weaken his position and to influence Roosevelt in favor of high officials who would like to push "Honest Harold" into a minor position in administrative councils.

Poison to Utilities

A powerful factor in the Senate's passage of a drastic holding company bill—along with presence on the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee of such progressive as Chairman Burt Wheeler, Coughens, Shipstead, and Donahay—was the work of a battery of three men on that committee who know the public utility business in all its convolutions.

Senator Homer Bone has thrashed the "power trust" so unmercifully in the state of Washington that its eastern holding companies are trying to sell their operating companies there to municipalities.

Sherman Mission of Indiana

Had been people's counsel for the Indiana regulatory commission and Fred Brown had been a utility commissioner in New Hampshire—jobs in which they learned the impossibility of regulating the vast holding company structures.

In committee, in cloakrooms, and on the floor, this trio operated with facts and deadly effectiveness. Without the three, the senate probably wouldn't have passed the strong administration bill.

Seven American league players have a trace of Indian blood—Roy and Bob Johnson, Elton Hogsett, Ben Chapman, Leon Goslin, John Whitehead and Odell Hale.
